description

Cielo, Farfalla and Prato are three rugs inspired by the Farfalla pattern designed by the Archizoom group in 1967 in their quest for an acid contrast between the floral, art nouveau decor and the experimentation that was taking place in Pop Art in those years. A reinterpretation of the main parts that made up the original pattern. The rugs are characterized by an explosion of primary colors and simple, geometric shapes spanned by decorative motifs—typical of the productions of artists such as Roy Lichtenstein and Andy Warhol—such as polka dots, checks and oblique stripes.
